‘People will be appalled to see police officers with guns on the street.’

‘Gangs have firearms and we’ll be robust in dealing with them’

ARMED PATROLS ON THE STREETS OF HARINGEY

By Lucy Purdy

A DECISION to send police officers armed with machine guns to patrol the streets of Haringey could “undo years of good work” between police and the community, according to critics.

In an unprecedented move, the Metropolitan Police has deployed armed officers to patrol gun-crime hotspots in Haringey in a bid to tackle a recent increase in gang and drug-related gun crime.

The radical initiative involves specialist firearms officers from Scotland Yard and has already been piloted in the Broadwater Farm Estate in Tottenham, according to Inspector Derek Carroll, who announced the scheme in Police Review magazine.

But the plan has been slammed by a wide range of people, including John Noblemunn, chairman of the Haringey Trident Independent Advisory Group, who warned it could alienate residents and make them feel “under siege”.

He said: “I think people will be absolutely appalled to see police officers with guns on the street. The community will be in fear and feel as though the borough is under a police state. “What happened to policing by consent and what happened to consulting with us? We don’t even know what the rationale is behind it.”

Members of the Metropolitan Police Authority, the body which governs the Metropolitan Police’s actions, have also denounced the plan, saying it was not consulted on the controversial decision.

MPA member Joanne Mc-Cartney, who is also Haringey’s representative on the London Assembly, has called for an immediate halt to the patrols to allow a proper debate to take place. She told the Advertiser: “A lot of work has been done in past years to rebuild the public’s trust and confidence in the police, so to do this without debate really beggars belief. Particularly in Haringey there is so much good work being done with gang members.

“We have a very proud tradition of having unarmed police on our streets and this seems to have come from nowhere.

“Have the police assessed

‘Saying that certain areas are so dangerous they need armed police will create stigma.’

what impact it will have on community relations?

“Saying that certain areas are so dangerous they need armed police patrols will create a real stigma. I think this could undo the years of good work that has gone before.”

There is also doubt as to whether London Mayor Boris Johnson, the chairman of the MPA, was aware of the armed police plan before it was announced to the media.

'Carrying a gun shouldn't affect how you police'

June and may double in size from next month in response to a reported soar in gun and gang-related crime across the capital. The team will consist of an inspector, two sergeants and 18 police constables and will carry out stop-and-search weapon sweeps as well as highly visible patrols designed to be a deterrent to gangsters.

Insp Carroll told Police Review: "Historically, CO19 was only called out when someone rang up to report a gun crime. But a lot of streets in London have young people in postcode gangs, aged 14 and upwards, and a lot of communities feel the gangs are controlling areas of estates. We are looking at gangs that have access to firearms and we will be robust in dealing with them.

"We chat to people and they love it. Some of our guys who were patrolling in Stockwell ended up playing football. My view is that just because you carry a gun, it should not affect the way you police."

But his claim that officers have received a "warm and supportive welcome" from residents in the pilot areas is at odds with the angry reaction in Haringey.

Mr Noblemunn added: "We have not been consulted and are very unhappy and concerned about what this will do for police and community relations."

Baby P abuser threatens to sue over poster wording

By Lucy Purdy

LAWYERS for Baby Peter's stepfather have demanded animal rights charity PETA take down a billboard describing him as a murderer.

Leslie Franks Solicitors warned People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals that using a poster of Steven Barker's face which draws a link between who abuse animals and those who hurt children, was libellous because it described him as a murderer.

The 33-year-old was jailed in May for "causing or allowing" the death of the toddler but acquitted of murder.

A letter faxed to PETA from solicitor Tim Bittlestone read: "I have been informed of your latest advertising campaign featuring my client. You should be aware that Mr Barker was acquitted of murder at the Central Criminal Court. Your campaign poster is therefore libellous. Please remove it immediately or we will be forced to institute proceedings against you."

PETA has now changed the billboard, which stands in Broad Lane, Tottenham, to read: "Steven Barker: Animal Abuser, Baby Abuser, Rapist. People Who Are Violent Towards Animals Rarely Stop There. Report cruelty to animals immediately".

Poorva Joshipura, of PETA, said: "The fact remains that violence towards animals is evil and if not corrected and unchallenged it may be a warning that the perpetrator won't stop there."

“Abusers are generally cowards who seek out the most vulnerable victims, including children, animals and elderly people.”

The billboard is just over a mile away from the house in Penshurst

Road where the 17-month-old died.

During his trial a court heard that Barker had enjoyed torturing guinea pigs as a child and skinned frogs before breaking their legs.

Barker was found guilty of raping a two-year-old in a separate case.

Peter Connelly suffered months of horrific torture and abuse before his death which resulted in 50 separate injuries, including a fractured spine.

Anti-fascists join Question Time protest

PROTESTERS from Haringey joined an angry crowd outside the BBC Centre last week in protest at BNP leader Nick Griffin's appearance on Question Time.

About 35 trade union and Unite Against Fascism campaigners from the borough went along to the centre in White City last Thursday evening.

Haringey TUC chairman, Keith Flett, said: "It was similar people in Germany in the early 1930s who saw Hitler as just a right-wing politician that gave the openings leading to Nazism."

Peter's mum drops appeal

BABY Peter's mother has dropped her bid to appeal her jail sentence.

Tracey Connolly, who was jailed indefinitely for the part she played in her son's death, was due to have an appeal heard in the Court of Appeal yesterday. Connolly, 28, and partner Steven Barker were told they would serve minimum jail terms of five and 12 years. All three were initially refused leave to appeal against their sentences in September but they were allowed to renew their applications to appeal.

Jason Owen, the lodger at Baby Peter's home who was also jailed over his death, launched a bid to appeal against his sentence yesterday. Owen was given an indeterminate sentence with a minimum term of three years.

The glorious theatre crumbling before our eyes

AN EERIE silence lies over Alexandra Palace's crumbling Victorian theatre, which is hidden behind locked doors just metres away from the excitable half-term buzz of the ice-rink.

The once-magnificent red and pink paintwork is now faded, ornate plaster crumbles from every wall and holes up to a metre wide expose the wooden beams of the damp-decaying ceiling. Two disintegrating plaster statues stand either side of the stage which once held vivid shows of music, variety and drama but which has lain empty and dusty for years. Updownstairs, fasten-shocked or at least depressed by the state of the once-beautiful, Grade II-listed building.

Restoration work to the tune of £90,000 is urgently needed, a Palace Trustees report confirmed last week – but funding has yet to be found.

And even that sum would be only a stop-gap measure. About £2million extra funding is needed for more extensive, permanent repairs when the theatre's future role in the Palace's turbulent history has been decided. Some work has been carried out during the past 12 years, including making the roof watertight, stabilising the internal ceiling and mending some of the wooden structures under the stage. Currently, visitors can only see the theatre through a perspex window in the foyer because of the danger of pieces of masonry plummeting from the walls and ceiling. About 400 people caught a tantalising glimpse during a heritage open day last month.

"Sadly, even with the interim repairs completed, we'd still be unable to lift this restriction because of health and safety issues," explained Andrew Gill, interim general manager of the Palace's charitable trust, who presented the report to the board.

"Haringey Council is going through its business and financial planning process and it's already clear that resources are severely constrained," he added. "A priority now is to explore other potential ways of raising this money."

arts venue which trustees are begging to salvage to help preserve the building and is one possible source of funding. The Heritage Lottery Fund or Theatres Trust are others.

Last used for small events including play readings and film screenings and previously also as a television scene store, the theatre is now an abandoned relic of its former glory. It has just one single balcony facing the stage with an original second upper balcony now removed and electrical wires even poke through the crumbling walls.

Because its original building has been declared poor in design, its most likely use is not as a theatre but as a unique, evocative setting for recitals, or the shooting of music videos or films. As we wandered about the dimly lit stage, clad in hard hats, I could imagine this as a feasible route to generating income from the theatre once more.

Nigel Willmott, chairman of the Friends of Alexandra Palace Theatre, said: "It's sad but we realise it's beyond the resources of the charity."

"This requires serious amounts of money. Apparently the acoustics in the auditorium are particularly good for music so it could be used for concerts.

"It would also be good to see it used again for what it was very successful at – those rather spectacular pantomime-like performances using the fantastic under-stage machinery.

"We will be working with the trust to stump up the funds to be able to secure the structure and bring the auditorium back into use at the earliest possible time."

Another report on the theatre's future will be presented to the board next year.

Schools take on the world

Combined effort to beat song-and-dance record

PUPILS in Tottenham proved they were head and shoulders above the competition as they attempted to smash a world record last Friday.

Some 1,450 children and staff from Gladesmore Community School and Crowland Primary School, both in Crowland Road, sang and performed children's song Head, Shoulders, Knees And Toes in a bid to smash the world record of just over 500.

Though they are awaiting official confirmation of the attempt from Guinness World Records, assistant headteacher Ijeaku Mezue, who co-ordinated the event, said she was confident they had beaten it.

"We had to perform the song with actions simultaneously for five minutes," she explained.

"I decided to go for it in July. Along with some pupils, I sat down and researched the record and the existing one was just over 500 people so we thought we could beat that!"

The elder pupils had coached the younger ones and they had practised the song's actions, but it was the first time everyone had performed together. Stewards checked everyone was performing in synchronisation and Mrs Mezue had to ensure pupils were singing the correct version. She said: "The children all came together to achieve something and I think they'll always remember it. It's a world record so we feel we've touched the world. It's not just us in tiny little Tottenham."

Palace hopes to skate into history books

ORGANISERS at Alexandra Palace hope to skate into the history books as they attempt to smash the world record for the longest conga on ice.

Skaters of a "reasonable standard" are being sought to take to the ice for the Palace's audacious record bid on November 12. They hope to smash the current record of 107 people and prizes are also on offer on the day for the best fancy dress.

"We really want as many people as possible to join into the spirit of the day to help us beat this record, so that they and Alexandra Palace get a place in the Guinness World Records book," said Rebecca Kane, managing director of the Palace's Trading Company.

An official adjudicator from Guinness World Records will be on hand to ensure the conga is all above board and the attempt will also be filmed for TV.

Skaters will warm up from 9.30am with the record bid taking place at about 10am, and will then be able to carry on skating for free until 1pm.

Ticket prizes to this year's pantomime at the rink will be awarded to the best-dressed people coming as Dorothy, Tin Man, the Lion or the Scarecrow from Wizard Of Oz. The show Oz On Ice, will run from December.

Those interested in taking part should contact the ice-rink in advance to register for the day. Skaters with their own skates are asked to bring them along but pairs will also be available on the day.

Call 020 8365 4386 to register and visit www.alexandrapalace.com to find out more.

Locked up: Acar

Two jailed for rape

TWO men from Finsbury Park who raped and robbed a backpacker near Buckingham Palace have been jailed.

Callem Fearnough, 21, of Millfield, Six Acres estate, was convicted on September 25 following a trial at Southwark Crown Court. Ismail Acar, 21, of the same address, pleaded guilty on the second day of the trial on September 8.

The men subjected the 21-year old New Zealand woman to a two-and-a-half-hour ordeal in St James' Park in August 2008. She was in London on a working holiday.

After meeting her on a night bus when she missed the last Tube home after drinks with friends, Acar and Fearnough took her to the park before beginning a series of brutal sexual assaults. At one point, the woman tried to escape but was caught again.

They also robbed her of jewellery and a bag containing cash, bank cards and an iPod. Acar made an unsuccessful attempt to use her bank cards at an ATM in Charing Cross after she gave a false PIN code.

The woman finally escaped and told a park security guard.

Acar and Fearnough were arrested two hours later at 7.15am in Horse Guards Road, after two PCSOs recognised them from the victim's description. On Friday, Acar was jailed for 13 years and Fearnough for ten.

Detective Sergeant Ivon Beer, of Westminster Sapphire Unit, said: "We are very pleased with the sentencing, which reflects the seriousness of the attack. We hope this acts as a deterrent to prevent such horrific attacks in future."

"I would like to convey my appreciation for the courage and dignity displayed by the victim throughout."

A third man was acquitted on all charges.

Sure Start Children's Centres

A sure start for you and your family

NOTHING compares to the love and happiness a child brings to your life, but being a parent can be tough at times. Lots of mums and dads can feel overwhelmed when expecting a baby or looking after small children, so it's good to know that help is at hand – and on your doorstep.

Whether you're looking for help with childcare, finding a job or a training course, health information, support, parenting advice or simply to meet other mums and dads in your area, Sure Start Children's Centres have something to offer.

You can discover sessions like messy play, music and baby massage or access specialist services like speech and language therapy and advice on healthy eating and finance.

Sure Start Children's Centres are available to all families with children aged under five and offer a range of health, family support, work and childcare services. These services are available from pregnancy right through to when your child starts school.

In London there are over 500 centres, benefiting over 423,000 children and catering for the needs of families in the local community. Mums, dads, grandparents and carers, are all welcome. Whether you're looking for an excuse to get messy with the kids, or you need support, there's something for everyone at your local Sure Start Children's Centre.

Mum Juliet Lovell, 34, found family support and formed lifetime friendships at her local Sure Start Children's Centre.

All children need lots of play and activity to help them develop new learning and social skills. For children with Down's Syndrome, like my three-year-old daughter Ionne, the need for this kind of stimulation is even greater.

As a family we enjoy going swimming or to the park or zoo at weekends, but when my husband Brian is at work through the week, the rest of us make the most of the facilities at Sure Start Children's Centres. I work as a nurse, but I've always been able to fit in visits to things like yoga sessions, baby massage and playgroups – first with our son Simba, who's now 12, and now with Ionne and our other son two-year-old Kalungi.

When the Welcome Sure Start Children's Centre opened nearby in Brent they had a really good range of courses and activities on offer, and we were even able to access health services like nutrition advice. The staff said they would still welcome any new ideas for other services that local families wanted and needed. Even though it was all brilliant, I couldn't help feeling there was even more that could be done for children like Ionne who have special needs.

For example, Ionne loves listening to music and stories, but she needs the storytellers to be even more animated to help her understand what's happening. She's also trying to talk but we don't always know what she is saying, which can be very frustrating for her.

I'd heard about Makaton signing groups where parents can encourage communication and language skills by learning how to sign while speaking to their babies. I suggested setting up a playgroup for children with special needs at the centre and the manager gave me her full support.

Eight months on, the group is doing really well. We have a two-hour session every week where we sign to storybooks and nursery rhymes. It's really helped us as a family. Even Kalungi is good at signing and we all now understand much more clearly what Ionne is trying to tell us.

Discovery of John's body at suicide spot

THE body of a man who disappeared from Tottenham almost a month ago has been found near notorious suicide spot Beachy Head, police have confirmed.

John Gavin's mother had made an emotional appeal for information after last seeing her son in Hewitt Road, Hornsey, on the morning of September 28.

Ann Gavin begged John to come home after the 36-year-old did not phone her as promised but police this week confirmed his body had been found near cliffs in East Sussex on Sunday. Officers say they are not treating his death as suspicious.

Lost: John Gavin, left, was found on Sunday

Beating violence

Urban music stars help with Just North project

TEENAGERS from Tottenham and Edmonton received a masterclass from rising stars of the urban music scene as part of a cross-border gang project.

MC Creed (pictured) and R&B star Young Nate visited the Angel Community Centre in Edmonton to meet 13-to-16-year-olds from Haringey and Enfield who are taking part in the Just North programme.

A recent spate of bloody cross-postcode clashes, involving youngsters brandishing knives and even guns, prompted the project in the hope it will tempt young people away from violence and into after-school and weekend activities. There have been 15 serious, violent incidents involving gangs in the area since June last year.

Pupils at Gladys Aylward School in Enfield and Northumberland Park School in Haringey are being particularly targeted as they lie near the border but the project is open to all young people in both boroughs.

Kirk Hudson, Just North co-ordinator, said the song-writing session at the centre in Raynham Road had gone down a storm. "It was a positive day and they're really looking forward to coming back to perform next month," he explained.

"We had about 18 kids come along from both schools who asked the artists about their inspiration and how they write lyrics. Then we played them a couple of beats and helped them write positive lyrics about their area and why they've decided not to get caught up in gang violence.

"The artists were really impressed with how talented they were."

The young people heard Young Nate explain he had made an agreement with his mum that he would complete his A-levels as well as pursuing a music career and each signed a pledge agreeing to try to avoid postcode violence.

Kirk added: "They were saying you may not be able to control others' actions but you can be in charge of what you do."

A for actors' effort

An Education (12A)

Dir: Lone Scherfig
Starring: Carey Mulligan, Peter Sarsgaard, Rosamund Pike

MIRRORING the frankness of Lynn Barber's interviews, I didn't enjoy this as much as I thought I would.

Oh, I found it diverting and enjoyable as a period piece, there were some sharp one-liners and the performances were great, but it lacked real drama and I came away from it feeling a little hollow.

Based on the famed journalist's memoir of her first proper relationship, aged 16, its title plays on the education she received in life against that she was obtaining in her attempt to get to Oxford University.

In suburban Twickenham circa 1962 Jenny, like most of Britain, was stuck in the drab, post-war world of austerity; a bit bored and desperately craving adventure and change to blow away the cobwebs. These pull up in a flash sports car containing the seemingly perfect David, an older man, who whisks Jenny away from her Latin homework and into a thrilling adult world of cocktails, cigarette smoke and trips to Paris.

David charms everyone, even Jenny's uptight father and he's soon persuaded him to take his daughter on a romantic weekend to Oxford where they share a bed.

About this point I started to turn against the initially charming adaptation. It wasn't necessarily the stomach-churning baby talk of David, or the queasy prospect of sex with a minor – unsatisfactorily handled by screenwriter Nick Hornby – but because I was failing to engage emotionally with the characters; a fault of Hornby and the bland direction of Lone Scherfig, and nothing to do with the actors who sparkle.

Carey Mulligan as the gently corrupted innocent was 22 at the time of filming but winningly plays a 16-year-old, while American Sarsgaard finds a good balance between suave and louche.

But it's the supporting characters who triumph with Rosamund Pike as the pretty, vacant Helen sublime, proving she is a natural comic actress with her hilarious delivery of Hornby's best lines, accompanied by a wide-eyed stare of wonder as if Bambi had tripped over Thumper.

Half a great animation but, like the central character, loses its tail and ends up going round in circles. Roald Dahl's beguiling fantasy is Americanised by leftfield director Wes Anderson who does succeed in capturing the essential strangeness helped by the voices of George Clooney, Meryl Streep and... Jarvis Cocker!

Couples Retreat (15)

Go skinny dipping with piranhas, inject arsenic into your eyeballs, invite X Factor's John and Edward around for karaoke... do all of these rather than paying your hard-earned cash to see this self-indulgent, tedious anti-comedy.

The Godfather (15)

Re-release of one of the greatest films ever, back where it belongs. A rare synergy of thrilling script, masterly direction from Francis Ford Coppola and great actors (Brando, Pacino and Caan et al) at the top of their game.

Zombieland (18)

Amusing zombie horror parody that calls Tarantino to mind with stylish cinematography and punchy one-liners. The incoherent plot lets it down, but it serves the purpose for a fun night out.

SPURS SUBMIT STADIUM PLANS

By Lee Husson

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR'S new stadium vision continues to gather pace as the club submitted a planning application to Haringey Council this week.

The Northumberland Development Project includes plans for the club's spiritual home at White Hart Lane to be demolished and the new 56,250 capacity stadium erected on the site and the land surrounding the current ground – with a 63-row, single tier stand in an attempt to maximise the atmosphere inside the stadium.

The plans also include a new public square in Tottenham High Road, as well as a hotel and a supermarket.

Spurs chairman Daniel Levy said: "The submission of the application is a hugely important step for the club.

"Our desire from the outset has been to create a scheme of major benefit for local people and to deliver the most fan-friendly stadium in the world.

"The inclusion of a new single tier stand combined with a fantastic stadium design demonstrates our absolute commitment to create the most atmospheric stadium for our supporters."

Club captain Ledley King added: "Spurs has been my life – the current matchday atmosphere is electric and I'm delighted the new stadium has been designed to maintain that. It makes Tottenham Hotspur what it is."

The plans submitted also include a new club museum and 434 new homes. Spurs will sell naming rights for the stadium.

MP for Tottenham, David Lammy, said: "There has been an overwhelmingly positive response from local people who want Tottenham to stay at the heart of the community.

"I believe the project will make a dramatic and positive difference to north Tottenham."

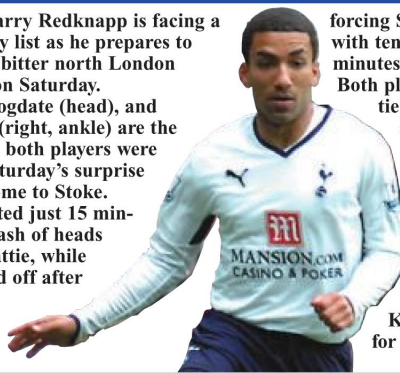

Injuries mount ahead of Arsenal clash

SPURS boss Harry Redknapp is facing a mounting injury list as he prepares to take his side to bitter north London rivals Arsenal on Saturday.

Jonathan Woodgate (head), and Aaron Lennon (right, ankle) are the latest doubts as both players were forced off in Saturday's surprise 1-0 defeat at home to Stoke.

Woodgate lasted just 15 minutes before a clash of heads with James Beattie, while Lennon hobbled off after Redknapp had made his three substitutions – forcing Spurs to play out the last 15 minutes with ten men. Glen Whelan struck with five minutes to go to seal Redknapp's misery.

Both players missed last night's Carling Cup tie with Everton, along with Ledley King and the suspended Jermain Defoe, who also misses the Emirates clash.

Redknapp said: "Jonathan went for a scan to make sure he hasn't fractured his cheekbone. His face is swollen.

"Aaron has also gone for a scan to see what damage he's done to his ankle. Hopefully it's not too bad and he'll recover."

King should, however, be ready to return for Saturday's game, kicking-off at 12.45pm.

Harefield too strong for 'Boro

AN injury-time goal from Lloyd Opara proved scant consolation for Haringey Borough as they slumped to a 2-1 defeat at home to Harefield United on Saturday.

Borough allowed their visitors to seize the early initiative and Alex Brown should have done better when he planted a free header over the bar from close range.

The opening goal eventually came in controversial circumstances on 28 minutes when Harefield were awarded a penalty for a supposed handball by Bosun Adebaki – moments after Borough keeper Nick Christofi had appeared to have been fouled.

Christofi pulled off an outstanding save to keep out Craig Totton's spot kick, but the ball rebounded into the patch of the onrushing Brown who made no mistake by firing home.

Borough were much improved after the break, but the visitors were gifted a second goal when a dreadful mix-up between Adebaki and Christofi presented Jack Reader with a simple opportunity.

The hosts had George Sifonios dismissed for lashing out on 85 minutes, and Opara's strike came too late to have any impact on the final result.

Haringey Borough, who were due to visit Kingsbury London Tigers in the Premier Division Cup last night, go to Tring Athletic on Saturday (3pm), before hosting Fisher on Tuesday in the London Senior Cup (7.45pm).
